The Writer - whether King, Peer, or Commoner - is judged with one judgment. Curiosity, Reverence, or Loyalty may procure for a Work an attentive reception and some present applause: but its perpetuation, its place in the Literature of the country, will depend upon either its intrinsic merits, or on its illustrative power in respect to the age in which it was written. On these latter grounds, the Royal productions here reprinted have been admitted into the Series. The Reulis and Cautelis in Scottis Poesie bring James VI. within the succession of our early Poetical Critics; whose writings - not very numerous, but now excessively scarce - are of great value in the study of English Poetry. For - not to speak of their often preserving matches of poems now utterly lost - they show us the theories of verification, the canons of Poetic taste and style, prevailing in our country, immediately before the advent of Spenser, Shakespeare, and their fertile contemporaries. These writings were reprinted by Mr. Haslewood in his Ancient Critical Essays, 2 vols. 4to, 1811-16: a Reprint, of which only 300 copies were printed, (and a portion of that number destroyed by fire), which is now scarce; and which, when met with, usually coils two or three pounds. The original texts being so rare; Mr. Haslewood s Reprint was, until lately, the only means whereby moll of us could obtain a knowledge of this important department of...
