Tripping, fluttering and frolicking, bespangled and airy-winged, they sang a group of songs about flower-bells, bubbles and other fairy things, and were called back by repeated encores.

Bohemian Composers Honored Among the musical numbers were a cello solo by Montague Machell, a clarinet solo with accompaniment by the Raja-Yoga College Band, by Iverson L. Harris, Jr.; the Angel's Serenade, by Braga, arranged for voice, violin, and harp, and rendered by Gertrude Peterson, Olive Shurlock and Susan Payson Hamilton, who were obliged to repeat the entire number, and selections by the large Raja-Yoga International Chorus, Weary Wind of the West, and My Love Dwelt in a Northern Land, both by Elgar. The Raja-Yoga College Band, which played both outside and inside the theater, gave...
